Did You Know?

Kids Need Vitamin D

- ★ Fifty-five percent of children tested in a study reported in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition had low levels of vitamin D. That number increased to 68% during the winter months because of lack of sun exposure and an increase in the amount of time spent indoors. Findings such as these have inspired the American Academy of Pediatrics to double for kids its recommended daily intake of this essential bone-building and immune-supporting nutrient.
- ★ During childhood, vitamin D is essential for development of bones and teeth. Without it, dietary calcium and phosphorous—two key bone-building minerals—can't be properly assimilated. When vitamin D intake is adequate, calcium and phosphorous absorption is increased by up to 40% and 80%, respectively.

What Kids Eat Today

- ★ On a typical school day, most kids consume 25% of their calories in the form of junk food, according to a recent study. French fries are the #1 vegetable source in children's diets.
- ★ Soft-drink consumption among children has more than doubled since the late 1970s. Most 8-year-olds consume soft drinks every single day. They are drinking these soft drinks in place of more nutritious alternatives such as milk and water—in many cases leaving them with a nutrition gap. Studies show that children who drink too much soda get smaller quantities of important nutrients such as calcium, phosphorus, folate, and vitamins A and C.
